In the final video of our Game Changer series, FORESIGHT futurists explore how people's access to technology, at a relatively low cost, has paved the way for a trend toward decentralization, called: self-organized citizen movements.

You might associate this with your neighbor who uses social media to organize rescue or relief efforts after a natural disaster. Or maybe you thought of “hacktivism” in the form of WikiLeaks or Anonymous. Perhaps your brain went to the emerging power of the massive protests organized by teens around climate change and gun violence. Maybe you think about people segregating themselves into living communities that may or may not have anything to do with land borders, often in the name of safety. Have you been hearing about the surge in armed militia groups? Or the reviving interest in communal living?

This leads to some deeper questions: Are we harnessing the full potential of decentralization for the benefit of health and well-being? And are we recognizing and doing all we should to avoid the potential costs?

The @FORESIGHT futurists have identified the rise of self-organized #citizenmovements as a #gamechanger that will impact the #futureforhealth + well-being.

Watch the video + let us know what you think. <http://bit.ly/3425ssr>

9 major #gamechangers could significantly change the #futureforhealth. Its time to examine these trends in order to design the type of #system we really need.

How will self-organized citizen movements + increased access to tech affect the design process? <http://bit.ly/3425ssr>

As society becomes increasingly fragmented and our in-person connections are replaced by digital ones, can self-organized citizen movements be #gamechangers for the #FutureforHealth? #Health #Futures @FutureforHealth <http://bit.ly/3425ssr>
